

1. 一見鍾情/一见钟情 (yī jiàn zhōng qíng)

This Chinese saying or idiom loosely translates to "Love at first sight." While it's common in the English language to use that phrase when referring to a person, this phrase in Chinese can be used on an object, too! The phrase separates into "一見" meaning "first sight" and "鍾情" meaning "fall in love."

2. 各花入各眼 (gè huā rù gè yǎn)

This Chinese proverb translates to "Different flowers catch different eyes." In English, the common phrase that can almost be related to this is "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder." For example, if someone stands out in a crowd to you but you can really explain why, you can tell your friend "各花入各眼." When broken down, "各花" means "individual flower"; "入" means "enter"; and "各眼" means "individual eye."

3. 厮守终身 (sī shǒu zhōng shēn)

This romantic Chinese love quote is the perfect phrase to use with the one you love so dearly. It can be translated to "Stay together for life." Each part of the phrase means something different. "厮" means "mutual or reciprocal"; "守" can mean "guardianship or companionship"; and "終身" means "lifetime or forever."

4. 有緣千里來相會/有缘千里来相会 (Yǒu yuán qiān lǐ lái xiāng huì)

"Fate brings together those that are a thousand miles apart." For the romantic soul, this love proverb says that distance cannot separate two souls who are meant to be together. Destiny has its ways to bring two people together!

5. 藕斷絲連/藕断丝连 (ǒu duàn sī lián)

Sometimes break-ups happen, but it doesn't mean you weren't in love! Directly translated, this proverb/idiom says "a broken lotus root is connected by its strings." If you've eaten lotus before, you'll know that there are small strings when you bite off a piece. Similarly, when two people break up, they're still connected in someway through heart strings.

6. 有情飲水飽，無情食飯飢/有情饮水饱，无情食饭饥 (Yǒu qíng yǐn shuǐ bǎo, wú qíng shí fàn jī)

"With love, water is enough; without love, food doesn't satisfy." This Chinese proverb expresses the satisfying nature of love. When you're in love, even the most difficult situation can become bearable. Without love, everything can feel unsatisfying and empty.

1. 路遙知馬力，日久見人心/路遥知马力，日久见人心 (lù yáo zhī mǎ lì, rì jiǔ jiàn rén xīn)

This proverb about life reveals that time can reveal the truth of life. Roughly translated, the proverb says "As distance tests a horse's strength, time reveals a person's heart." Over time, the truth will be set free, so don't blindly believe or make assumptions. Let time lead you to where you need to be.

2. 冰凍三尺，非一日之寒/冰冻三尺，非一日之寒 (bīng dòng sān chǐ, fēi yī rì zhī hán)

Have you ever heard the English saying "Rome wasn't build in a day?" Well, this is the Chinese version of that! Remember that good things take time. With a little perseverance, persistence, and hope you can achieve whatever it is you have set out to do. This proverb can be translated to say "It takes more than one cold day for the river to freeze three feet deep."

3. 人不可貌相 (rén bù kě mào xiàng)

Here's another proverb that you've mostly heard in English. This is the Chinese version of "Don't judge a book by its cover." When this proverb is translated, it means "People aren't their appearance." So if you're ever in a situation where you catch yourself judging based on a cover, remember this proverb to help keep you grounded!

4. 耳聽為虛，眼見為實/耳听为虚，眼见为实 (ěr tīng wéi xū, yǎn jiàn wéi shí)

This classic proverb tells us that "seeing is believing." Sometimes, what we hear may not be true (i.e. rumors) so it's better to confirm it for yourself. It's